Julie Martin

“A Cool School in the Kimberley”

We family historians spend many years researching the lives of our forebears but sometimes the most interesting stories come from those we grew up with – our immediate family.

That was Julie Martin’s experience when she recently spent time with her brother as he reminisced about his time in the Kimberley as the Government appointed teacher to the Aboriginal children on Gogo Station.

Using relevant images, Julie will tell the fascinating story of his life on a remote WA cattle station, his unusual classroom and the dramatic changes to the lives of Indigenous people that were on the horizon.
